To Whom It May Concern:

I am pleased to lend the full support of the Mayor's Office to The CyberEthics Project, a timely and much-needed education program created by the Socrates Institute here in Alexandria, Virginia.

As one of our city's most valuable non-profit educational organizations, the Socrates Institute has demonstrated its worth over the past decade in the form of creative and innovative projects that have successfully linked schools to our growing business community. Dr. Radnofsky has even brought her programs to Alexandria's sister cities in Europe where they were also widely appreciated.

I have personally served with Dr. Radnofsky on the Alexandria Education Partnership, an organization that supports the city's teachers through tutoring programs, special events, and business partnerships. Her dedication to improving education in this country is evidently sincere and quite enduring.

The Socrates Institute's current initiative to create a K-12 multimedia project in teaching cyberethics, cybersecurity, and cybersafety is clearly needed in light of the advancements being made in technology today. Indeed, we wait with great anticipation to see it implemented in the classroom as well as the community and hope that it will set the standard for other programs to come.

Sincerely,

William D. Euille
Mayor
